It has become more costly to do business on the internet because of general viruses, requiring everyone to have to purchase yearly contracts with McAfee and Norton to get the latest updates to block generally current viruses. When a hard drive crashes, generally the fee to fix is $80 and up by an expert at virus removal, or a new harddrive at more than this in cost, along with generally lost harddrive info, and in some cases new computer systems as replacements for whatever they cost. If this wasn't enough to have to deal with, now we have this new kind of general nuisance to contend with. The spyware removal companies want about the same fee for this service along with updates, and yearly removal. So now I have to have a system to deal with removal or interception of intruders into my business and costing me more money and some more desk time in front of my computer. It is my understanding that the spyware removal systems were developed by the very spyware people that do the spying. It is my further understanding that they are divided in their thinking and now we have the intruders and the intruder removers. I think a simple law would suffice to stop this kind of intrusion. It is no ones business to be into my business. One of the famous sayings during the founding of the nation pertaining to commerce was: "Mind Your Business". I do think that some people need to mind their own business and not mine. Thanks for your time and considerations in this matter of importance.
